

Empowering Future Global Leaders

NexGen Leadership Hub Program

Pace University, New York

The NexGen Leadership Hub offers an unparalleled educational opportunity for young leaders aged 13-17 to dive into the world of international relations, diplomacy, and global problem-solving. This program is specially designed to provide students with a foundational university-level education while they're still in school, preparing them for participating at the Model United Nations Conferences across the World and equip them with the essential skills and knowledge needed for future success.

Why This Course is Important:

In today's interconnected world, understanding global issues and possessing effective communication, negotiation, and leadership skills are crucial for anyone looking to make an impact. This program teaches students about the core functions of the United Nations and the challenges facing countries worldwide, from climate change to global health. By exploring these critical topics, students develop a broad understanding of how global cooperation and international diplomacy work.

The NexGen Leadership Hub at Pace University empowers young students to become informed global citizens who are well-prepared for future challenges. Through hands-on activities, engaging lectures, and a full Model UN simulation, students gain practical experience in global governance, research, and critical thinking.

Program Highlights:

- University-Level Experience: Students will engage with university-level material, preparing them for higher education and developing skills applicable in any field. They will leave with a foundational understanding of international relations and global diplomacy.
- Practical Skills in Diplomacy and Negotiation: From structured argumentation to understanding negotiation tactics, students will learn the art of diplomacy and gain insights into the workings of international policy.

- Research and Analysis Skills: Students will develop critical research skills, learning to find, evaluate, and use reliable sources for international policy analysis, a skill set essential for any aspiring leader.
- Public Speaking and Communication: Through structured exercises, students gain confidence in their public speaking abilities, learning to communicate effectively and persuasively in front of an audience.
